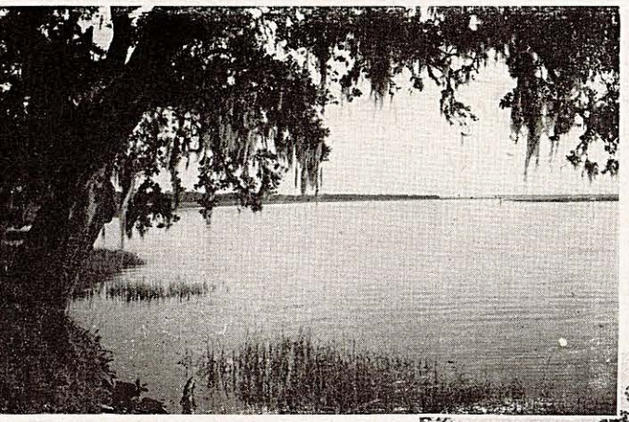
The Pirates' Isle

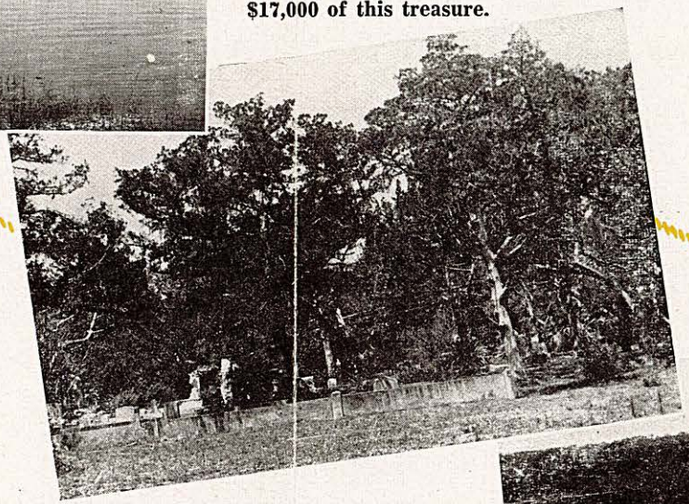


Fernandina Beach and Amelia Island have been the haunt of the pirate brothers Jean and Pierre Lafitte, Luis Aury: of bandit Dan McGirt; adventurer George McGregor; and a host of slave-traders and gun-runners. In those early years the island looked much like th's picture, and the deep, protected harbor gave a refuge to some of the greatest rascals sailing the Seven Seas. Yet they never recovered all the loot buried on the island, and it is reported that some persons have already unearthed $17,000 of this treasure.

The Shrimp Fleet

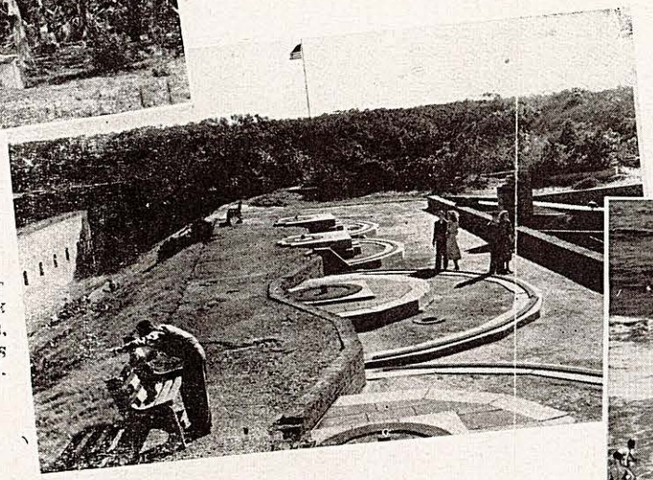
Here is part of Fernandina Beach's picturesque fishing fleet. Most shrimp boats are equipped with two-way radios which keep each captain in touch with his sister ships and with the port. Even air planes are used in directing the boats to the best fishing waters. Raucous sea gulls and deep-beaked pelicans are on hand when the boats return to port and clamour for free handout from the day's catch.

Scene in Bosque Bello Cemetery



Shaded by beautiful old cedar trees is one of the first cemeteries of this area. Many of the head-stones have inscriptions so old that legibility has been impaired by the elements during the passage of time.

Historic Old Fort Clinch



is located at the entrance to Fernandina Beach harbor. It is a part of a beautiful State Park which boasts excellent fishing, fine beaches, and intriguing jungle trails. Brick masons and engineers marvel at the rare French military brickwork of the Fort.

Enjoy A Wonderful Beach

with its expanse of hard-packed white sand, and its background of graceful dunes, partly covered by waving stands of sea oats. The water is mild, the sun and breeze inviting—here is the place for days of energetic beach activity or peaceful relaxation. Also try the beach on a magic night, with a full moon rising out of the sea!

Commercial Fishing

An silhouette, part of Fernandina Beach's shrimp fleet. Most of the shrimp boats are equipped with two-way radios which keep the captains in touch with sister ships and with the port. Raucous sea gulls and the deep-beaked pelicans search out the boats on their return to port and clamor for a free handout from the catch of the day.

Drive On The Famous Beach

and enjoy the sensation of gliding over gently undulating sand. Here at low tide you can follow the scalloped edges of the waves on the beach for about twelve (12) miles, and rejoice in the same fresh breezes that filled the sails of the pirate fleets.

Family Fun

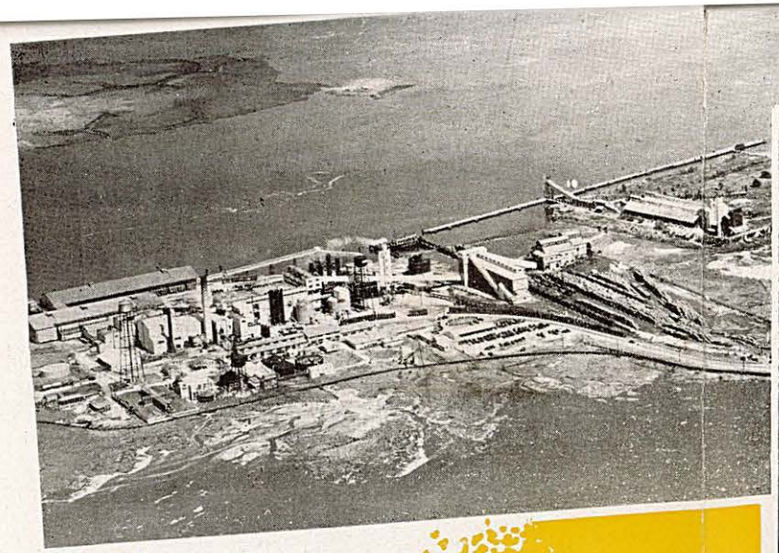
The Fernandina Beach South Jetty. Here is a wonderful spot for the whole family. At the northermost part of the beach the South jetty provides excellent fishing for dad while the rest of the family play on the beach or in the quiet waters nearby.

Amelia Island Light House

With its bright revolving light guiding mariners at night, and its gleaming white tower by day with a red [illegible] spiral stripes, a light house is an almost universal attraction to young and old. This one is situated on one of the highest coastal locations between New York and Miami, it offers a stimulating view of the island.

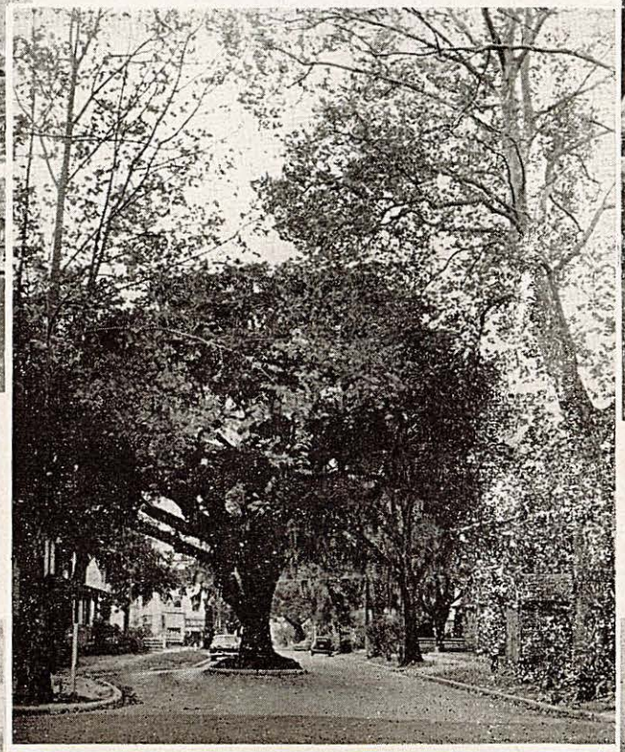
Named From History

The famous "Jean Lafite" ferry boat which serves the traveling public across the St. Johns river between Mayport and Fort George on the Buccaneer Trail. Named after the famed pirate who made his headquarters near Amelia Island.



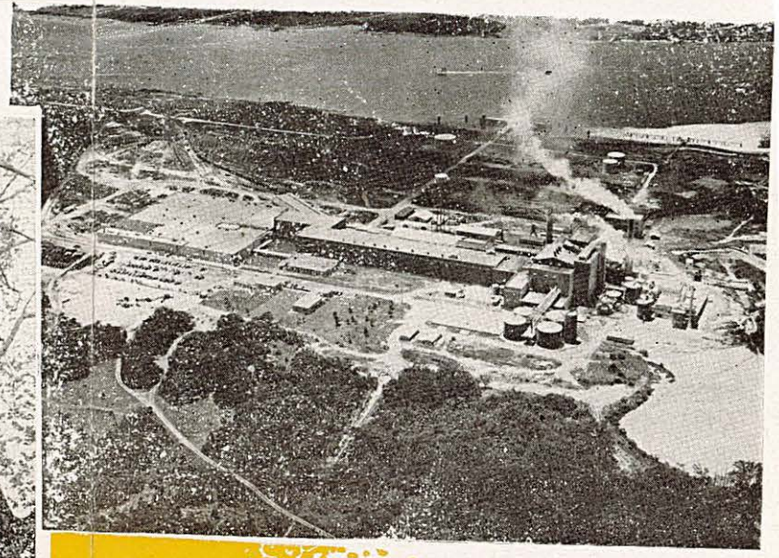
Rayonier, Inc. Plant

Rayon Tire Cord, made from dissolving pulp, is produced by the Fernandina Beach mill of Rayonier, Incorporated. Trainloads of pulpwood, millions of gallons of water, plus the necessary chemicals and knowledge are combined in the manufacture of the raw material for viscose acetate and plastic industries.



Not all Streets In Fernandina

Beach have trees in the middle of them, but some do. Fernandina Beach and Amelia Island are proud of their aged live oaks and their groves of red cedar. In addition, the oleanders, crepe myrtle, camellias, azaleas, and poinsettias provide a year-round garden setting for many a home in this city of trees.



Container Corporation Plant

The Fernandina Beach Plant of Container Corporation of America makes from the pulpwood of Florida and Georgia the heavy paper that goes into the familiar cartons in which so many commodities are shipped today. A recent addition is the Container Box Plant which will make cartons used throughout the world.

Beyond The Cabbage Palms

stands the Post Office and Customs House. One block north, and one block west, and marked by a bronze plaque, is the site of the residence of David L. Yulee, U. S. Senator, Statesman, Developer, and Florida's First Railroad Builder.

Fernandina Beach Harbor

once a pirate rendezvous, now an anchorage for ocean-going ships and busy fishing boats, is enviably located only four and one half miles from the open sea, and is maintained at a depth of twenty-eight feet at low water.

Ride Through Unspoiled Scenery

Try Scenic Highway A1A, "The Buccaneer Trail". Recently constructed through areas previously untouched by road or rail. This modern highway connects with bridge and ferry service over the St. Johns River to Jacksonville Beach, and points south.
